

This autumn a powerful exhibition of artwork will be exhibited in two Cheshire locations, giving a voice to adults who have survived abuse. Still a topic that carries much stigma in society, this project organised by Crewe-based charity Survive, aims to enable those who have survived abuse, to express their stories, emotions and journeys creatively. Through drawings, paintings, sculptures, poems, and more, the exhibition will highlight the journey abuse survivors go through. From the pain of the abuse, to the freedom that is possible, this will tell a story in a new and fresh way.

Peter Buckingham, Chair of the charity, says 'although abuse is all around us, many people don't know what to say, or how to approach the subject. However, some brave voices are speaking out to enlighten and inform, to bring the subject out of the dark and into the light'.
